TEMPRANILLO

Phenological description: Medium to late sprouting and medium-early ripening. Adaptation: it is a vigorous variety that adapts to all types of soils, with a preference for well-lit south-facing terrains. The most appropriate thermal regions for growing it are II, III and IV. It has little sensitivity to spring frosts but is sensitive to warm spring winds. Pruning: depending on the cultivation zone, long or short pruning is performed, respecting the production-quality balance, and taking into account that it is a medium-production variety. Resistance to pests and diseases: very sensitive to oidium and rather sensitive to mildew and erinosis.

TASTING NOTE

Visual phase: A clean, medium-bodied wine with violet tinges.

Olfactory phase: Fresh, clean and intense with prominent notes of blackberry and raspberry. Well-structured and persistent.

Gustative phase: Well-balanced, good body, fresh, medium persistence and pleasant.

*Monovarietal 100% tempranillo grape

PARDINA

This is a vigorous variety, very fertile from the first buds of the shoots, so it adapts to short prunings. It is one of the principal varieties grown in Badajoz, its characteristics being very similar to Airen, grown in La Mancha. The wines obtained from it are full-flavoured, fruity and pale in colour.

TASTING NOTE

Visual phase: Green to straw-yellow tones.

Olfactory phase: Fruit aromas of banana, pineapple and fennel.

Gustative phase: Well-balanced, fresh and with medium persistence.

*Monovarietal 100% pardina grape

TASTING NOTE

Visual phase: Clean and bright with an attractive raspberry-pink colour.

Olfactory phase: Fresh and sweet. Notes of fruit jelly, giving way to very fruity aromas of wild strawberry.

Gustative phase: Fresh, with a pleasant sweet, fatty touch. Long in the mouth and very easy to drink.
